WILLIAMS' CASE EXPECTED TO GO TO JURY TODAY

State's Attorney Starts Summing Up at 12.10; Followed by Bossard

"PROTECTED SISTER" Bucks County Huckster Says He Doesn't Think He Did A Wrong

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—(INS)—Shouting: "Kelley, I don't think I've done a wrong. I did it to protect my sister," Harold E. Williams, little Bucks County huckster, threw the courtroom into consternation today at the resumption of his murder trial when he arose from his seat in the witness box and pointed out Assistant District Attorney Charles F. Kelley.

"So," replied the astonished prosecutor.

"Yes," Williams retorted as he seated himself.

The assertion was the highlight of Williams' 35 minutes of testimony. He was called to the stand soon after the opening of court today.

His testimony was full of sensations as he made no effort to deny having killed William F. Prophet, his brother-in-law on the night of November 22.

Twice during his testimony he was overcome. His head sank and his chin touched his chest. His face flushed. Once he wept. Again and again he nervously smoothed his hair.

A few minutes later, while chief of county detectives, Patrick McKewen, was on the stand denying that Williams had been assaulted while being examined by the police, Williams jumped from his chair at his counsel's table, brandished his fist and screamed: "You lie."

Defense counsel was forced to pull him into his seat.

Throughout his testimony Williams denied that he had the insurance money in mind as a motive for killing Prophet.

Assistant District Attorney Charles F. Kelley, the State's attorney, started his summing up at 12.10. Jay C. Bossard, defense counsel, will make his address, and it is expected the case will go to the jury between 3 and 4 o'clock this afternoon.

SPRINGFIELD HONORS ITS OWN LINCOLN TODAY

By Justin H. Forrest
I. N. S. Special Correspondent

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 12.—Springfield, home town of Abraham Lincoln in his matured years, from which he went, first to Congress and then to the White House, staged elaborate memorial services today in honor of the 122nd anniversary of his birth.

Visitors, who average 100,000 a year, thronged his home and Oak Ridge Cemetery, where the reconstruction of his tomb is being completed, and which probably will be dedicated sometime this year by President Herbert Hoover.

Participants in the ceremonies in the State Arsenal, which inaugurated the celebrations, included Gov. L. L. Emerson, Gov. M. Brucker, of Michigan, the ambassador from Japan, Katsujii Debuchi; Gov. William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, known in his home state as "Alfalfa Bill" and other notables. His Excellency, the ambassador from Japan, took for his text "Lincolnism in International Affairs," and drew his lesson from Lincoln's "with charity towards all" attitude as President.

This afternoon, the chief celebration was in the Sangamon County court house, formerly the State Capitol, in which Lincoln served as a member of the State Assembly, and where, later, he held receptions after his nomination for the presidency in the "Wigwag" in Chicago in 1860, and where part of his inaugural address was prepared.

UP TO HOOVER AS TO SPENDING OF MONEY

Senate Puts Question Right Up to Secretary Hyde to Answer

CONFERENCES ARE HELD

By William K. Hutchinson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The sinister specter of drought relief hovered before the White House today, following the Senate's startling action in calling on Secretary of Agriculture Hyde to say whether food, clothing and medicine may be bought with loans made under the administration's $20,000,000 compromise relief bill.

By its action, the Senate officially directed the responsibility to President Hoover in their long controversy over use of Federal money to relieve starving citizens in drought areas. Only a favorable reply from Mr. Hoover's cabinet adviser can save the compromise, prevent defeat of appropriation bills and block a filibuster for a special session of the new congress after March 4.

The interrogation of Hyde was sponsored in a resolution by Senator Borah (R) of Idaho. It caught administration leaders by surprise and when it was adopted by an overwhelming vote, they abandoned a proposed night session and adjourned the Senate to await the reply.

During the night, there were a constant series of conference between the president and his advisers. Administration Senators virtually wore a path to the White House, urging the president to agree to an explanation that would grant the use of money for the purchase of food, clothing and medicine.

One group of conferees which included Senators Smoot (R) of Utah, Reed (R) of Pennsylvania, and Morrow (R) of New Jersey, advised the President to say the government could not follow the money to its ultimate use, once it was borrowed on proper security. This was the advice given Mr. Hoover but by other administration Republicans.

The insurgents in both parties who fought the compromise on the ground it abandoned the jobless citizens of cities and those farmers too poor to give security for a loan, were jubilant over the trend of battle. They had been on the defensive for two days, while spokesmen for the drought states, led by the Democrats, Senators Robinson and Caraway, of Arkansas, declared themselves satisfied with the compromise. Both Robinson and Caraway insisted food and clothing could be bought with the proceeds of government loans but others questioned their predictions.

"Now we will learn if food and clothing may be bought," said Doran, after the resolution was adopted. "Either food will be bought under this compromise or we'll beat the bill."

"FOREMOST CHAMPION OF FREEDOM IN OUR POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC LIFE" IS MANNER IN WHICH LINCOLN IS DESCRIBED BY STUDENT

Miss Marion Monaco Reads Essay On the Great Emancipator at Commencement Exercises of February Class of Bristol High School

On the occasion of the graduation exercises at Bristol High School Tuesday evening, the essay of Miss Monaco who was among those receiving diplomas, is here given.

"TODAY AND LINCOLN"

Of all the great men of his day, Abraham Lincoln with his power of reasoning and understanding was the foremost champion of freedom in our political and economic life. In the statements of those issues with which he was confronted as President, he, aided by his logic, was able to carry conviction to the minds of every grade of intelligence. Therefore, we will bring up the problems of today, asking ourselves: "What would Lincoln think? What would Lincoln do?"

A national interest of today and also of yesterday is the Protective Tariff. Lincoln, being an advocate of economy in government, naturally advocated the tariff. He considered that to secure to each laborer the whole product of his labor was a worthy object of any good government, leading him to believe that the protective principle would advance this object. He explained:

"The habits of our whole species fall into three great classes—useful labor, useless labor and idleness. Of these the first only is meritorious, but the two latter while they exist, are robbing the first of a large portion of its just rights. It appears to me that all labor done directly and indirectly in carrying articles to the place of consumption, which could have been produced in sufficient abundance, with as little labor, at the place of consumption as at the place they were carried from, is useless labor."

According to the statement, we may say that he must have realized that our country and its products were ex-

BENSALEM STUDENTS RENAME SAME OFFICERS

Election Held for Officials
For the Second Semester

OTHER SCHOOL NEWS

BENSALEM TWP. HIGH SCHOOL, Cornwells Heights, Feb. 12.—Election of officers for the second semester has taken place at the school. The same officers who served the council so well during the first semester were re-elected. They are: President, Axel Kienso; vice-president, Alma Ferrier; secretary, Viola Mae Haldeman; treasurer, Joseph Copestake. After the election the meeting of the student council was adjourned.

A game which was supposed to be played by the Bensalem basketball teams vs. the New Jersey Institute for the Deaf was postponed from the regular date, which was February 9th. This game will probably be played at a later date.

The assembly program on Friday was very interesting. The program began with a Bible reading by Miss Schroeder of the history department. Following this was a song by the students, "Heavenly Concord." Emilie Wildman then gave a recitation entitled "For All That and All That," by Robert Burns. Henry Vansant presented a violin solo which was enjoyed by all. Betty Lathrop and Dorothy Wiener sang a duet entitled "Pirate Dreams." A recitation was then given by Hadwig Schodowski which was called "Annabelle Lee." The student body then contributed to the entertainment by singing "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes." Harold Fitch and orchestra called the "Troubadors" entertained with several popular selections which were well liked by all.

At this point in the meeting Gay W. Miller, coach of athletics and instructor in physical education, gave the student body the history of football. After this interesting address the members of the football squad at Bensalem for 1930 were presented with their letters. Those to receive these coveted pieces were: Paul Dean, Adolf Andrews, John Lacy, Henry Bowman, Francis William, Newton Elizer, Raymond Katzer, Harold Kiwi, Henry Edjys, George Luciana, William Kelly, Jack Mortimer, Helmut Foerster, Leonard Urbach and Harvey Crawthors. Honorable mention was given to Harry J. Seltzer, William Devitt, Arnold Severns, Elsworth Barth and Elwood James.

The Troubadors then played "Bensalem" and everyone sang.

tensive enough to answer all the real wants of the people, leaving the burden of the revenue fall almost entirely on the wealthy and luxurious few.

A second problem—that which is foremost in the minds of economists all over the world—is the present unemployment situation. Lincoln's views concerning this unemployment situation can be extracted from this one sentence which was contained in one of his many speeches:

"This matter of employment can only be secured by an ample, steady, and certain market in which to sell the products of our labor."

ACCIDENT PREVENTION DISCUSSED AT MEETING

Rohm & Haas Employees Hear
Addresses of Experts in Their Line

A HELPFUL PROGRAMME

There was an informal meeting and general discussion by the employees of the Rohm & Haas Company last night as to the causes of and the ways and means of preventing accidents in the chemical plant located at South Bristol.

The meeting was not the outgrowth of a series of accidents but was held because the men as well as their employers have an urgent desire to make the plant 100 per cent accident-proof.

The record at the present time is exceptionally good, but there is that urgent desire to make it beyond criticism. Harold H. Thompson, production manager, presided at the conference and there were a number of experts in accident prevention work present as guests of the evening. These included Col. John S. Spicer, Department of Labor and Industry of State of Pennsylvania; William C. Byers, Joseph Nagel and T. B. Parker, Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association; and Clinton Oblinger, deputy factory inspector of State of Pennsylvania.

In opening the meeting chairman Thompson gave a resume of the plant's accident record for 1930 and a comparison with that of the year previous.

Each man who had in any way met with an accident during 1930, regardless of its triviality, was called upon to tell just how that accident occurred, its cause, where the responsibility for it rested, and suggestion of what steps should be taken to prevent a repetition, and what had been done since the accident to prevent similar ones occurring.

These talks by the men were exceptionally interesting, productive of suggestions of value.

Col. Spicer in his talk to the men said: "I do not know of a meeting which I have attended during many in the last 15 years throughout the State, which have been more productive of good than this one."

"This method of discussion which you have had here is the best that I know of. There is nothing that is better than being frank about the causes of an accident."

"Accidents cannot be prevented until you have the truth as to their causes. Investigations often amount to nothing as there is often an effort made to cover-up."

"Your method here is unique and I'm sorry to say is not more general throughout the State. They arouse the safety consciousness."

Col. Spicer told the cost in dollars and cents of each accident to the victims who had previously spoken.

"Investigate every accident," said the speaker. "It is not the nature of the injury which is of so much importance but the cause of the accident."

Continuing his talk Col. Spicer said that it is generally believed that accident prevention is not receiving as much attention and neither is it impressing to as great an extent the older people as it is the children of the present day.

"Accident prevention is a wonderful opportunity of aiding your fellow man," concluded the speaker.

Mr. Porter and Mr. Nagel both spoke briefly on accidents and their prevention.

The men were then invited to partake of a light repast which was served on the spacious enclosed porch of the club house.

ASKS $50,000 DAMAGES AGAINST COACH CO., HERE

Joseph Kelly, of Philadelphia,
Sues Delaware River
Coach Co.

INJURED JANUARY 16TH

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 12.—Joseph Kelly, Philadelphia, has filed a damage suit for $50,000 against the Delaware River Coach Company, Bristol. It was learned today, after the suit was filed in the Prothonotary's office.

Kelly alleges that on January 16, 1929, he was walking along the Bristol Pike near the Penn Valley Road, and was struck and run down by a Delaware River Company bus.

He avers that he suffered a fractured skull and other internal injuries. Kelly also alleges that the bus failed to give any warning of its approach and was carelessly and recklessly operated.

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 12.—Two more damage suits have been filed in the Prothonotary's office.

Arthur Brashears has entered a damage suit for $25,000 against W. B. Marquard, Easton. It is alleged that on Friday afternoon, Nov. 13, Brashears, who waited for an opportunity to cross North Main street near Church street, was run down without warning and struck and hurled several feet.

Brashears has been in the Abington Hospital since that time and will probably be confined there for some time to come. He avers that his injuries are of a permanent nature and will prevent him from earning his livelihood.

The plaintiff also avers that Marquard was operating his car at an excessive rate of speed.

The Pennsylvania Company has been sued for damages amounting to $30,000. The plaintiffs in this case are Mrs. Helen Hopkins and William Craft.

On Dec. 23, 1929, about nine o'clock in the evening, Helen Hopkins was the guest in an automobile which William Craft was driving on the Wheatshaf Road, approaching the grade crossing.

They allege that before driving on the crossing, Craft stopped, looked up and down the tracks, listened and seeing and hearing nothing he started to cross the tracks.

While driving across the tracks they were struck by a train. They also allege that the train failed to give any notice of its approach.

Craft's car was completely demolished and Mrs. Hopkins was taken to the Harriman Hospital, Bristol. She sustained injuries and shock.

BRISTOL SECOND IN STATE TAX PAYMENTS

Residents of Borough Paid A
Total of $5038.86
Last Year

DOYLESTOWN LEADS CO.

Residents of Doylestown pay 23% of all the State tax that is paid in Bucks county, according to the annual statement compiled by County Treasurer Henry S. Johnson, of Quakertown.

During the past year the residents of Doylestown's three wards paid a State tax amounting to $24,638.34, with a small balance of $183.19 remaining unpaid. The County Seat leads the county, the next largest State tax paid by a borough being Quakertown with $9,729.12.

The Third Ward of Doylestown paid the largest State tax in Bucks county, amounting to $10,238.23 last year. The First Ward paid a State tax of $9,959.01 and the Second Ward's State tax amounted to $5,041.07.

The total State tax paid by all the districts in Bucks county the past year amounted to $106,674.42 with a balance of $5652.97 remaining unpaid.

Bristol, the largest borough in Bucks county paid a State tax last year of $5,038.86, with a balance of $607.94 still due. Ranking third in Bucks county is Bensalem township, where residents paid a State tax of $7864.85 last year with a balance of $279.20 remaining unpaid.

A reckoning of the annual State tax statement indicates that Doylestown's wealth, based on State tax returns made to the County Treasurer, falls just a bit short of being three times as large as any other community in the county.

Other boroughs in Bucks county paid State tax as follows the past year: Perkasie, $3787.05, with $187.29 unpaid; Newtown, $2669.86, with $9.22 unpaid; Morrisville, $2042.88, with $281.48 unpaid; Quakertown, $9,729.12, with $174.98 unpaid; Doylestown township, $4179.92, with $29.89 unpaid; Langhorne, $2239.29, with $129.59 unpaid.

The smallest State tax paid by any Bucks county district the past year was in Dublin Borough where $32.80 was paid and $43.19 remains unpaid. The statement also shows that in Ivyland Borough, New Britain Borough, New Hope Borough, Perkasie Third Ward, every cent of the State tax due, was paid, while every other district in the county has a balance due.

The total amount of county tax received in the past year in Bucks county amounted to $266,958.43, with $100,899.22 yet due.

Bristol Borough paid the largest amount of county tax with a total of $32,029.16 in her six wards, with $7,716.98 remaining unpaid. Doylestown ranks second with a county tax paid amounting to $14,996.25 in three wards with $2,642.25 unpaid.

Has Occurred in Past Few Days

ANDALUSIA, Feb. 12.—An Elkins Park man alleges that he was forced into his own car at North Philadelphia and at the point of a pistol ordered into the rear of the machine while one of his captors sat beside him and the other got behind the wheel.

Keeping the victim, John Lave, Jr., Elkins Park, Pa., covered with the gun of the highwayman who sat beside him, the pair drove Lave out the Roosevelt Boulevard to the Bristol Pike and then to the State Road. When an unfrequented spot was reached, Lave was robbed of $17 and he was ordered from the car. The highwaymen then drove off with the sedan which carried license number LD-4.

The victim went to the service station of Russell Potter nearby and called upon Constable Thomas Crawford, of Bristol Township. The latter immediately notified the Langhorne State Highway Patrol and the Morrisville State Police, New Jersey State Police were also notified and descriptions of the stolen car and the handits were broadcast over the teletype.

Lave is the fourth person kidnapped and tossed out of cars at Andalusia during the past few days.

Lave left Philadelphia by train yesterday after leaving his automobile at the North Philadelphia Station. When he returned at about 8 o'clock last night and was about to get into the machine the two armed men stepped up to him. Covering him with revolvers they ordered him to climb into the rear of the car. One of the pair got in with him, keeping his weapon constantly trained on the victim, while the other started the motor and drove away from the station.

LINCOLN

In the tribute that is paid to the memory of Abraham Lincoln today is the best guarantee of the perpetuity of those institutions and the eventual triumph of those ideals we call American.

Lincoln expressed clearly that basic tolerance and warm human-heartedness that in our better moments we would apply to all our dealings with our fellowmen. More, Lincoln applied those policies, practiced his preaching, lived true to his faith.

We of this generation have failed distressingly at times in what should have been our effort to steer true to Lincoln's course. But, though we may be disappointed in ourselves, let us not be discouraged. That we acclaim the ideals of Lincoln and brood upon his life so staunch and true, is the best gauge that some day we shall more nearly approach to the measure of national greatness and individual rectitude that his spirit, so humble yet so proud, established for all time as our guide.

Lincoln excelled chiefly in this: That he thought simply, saw straight, did the right thing because it was the right thing, stood by his code and did not yield.

How quickly those re-echoing voids of our daily life today would be enriched by but one breath of the spirit of the emancipator!

CONSTRUCTIVE

That community is indeed poor about which nothing good can be said, but poorer still is the citizen so blinded by petty prejudice and self-interest that his criticisms of the town of his abode are many and never interspersed with approbation.

Just as every human being has faults, every community, which is but a collection of human beings, has defects. But, considering the number of human failings, is it not surprising that the average city and town has so few shortcomings and can please so many?

In spite of these civic deficiencies there is not a community, not even the signal frontier settlement, which, if it should count noses, would find its knickers exceeding in number its boosters. Would one say those who are blind to their town's disadvantages are more near-sighted than those who cannot see its advantages?

There would be less knocking if knickers realized that a community is just what its citizens make it and that it is a confession of personal weakness to diagnose the home town as incurably sick and decrepit. By their fault-finding knickers admit they have failed to do their part in making their town in their ideal of what a community should be.

That citizen best serves his community who is unflinching in his praise where praise is due and who is fearless in his condemnation of things to be condemned. Constructive effort can be the fruit of destructive criticism.

Many a man gets cold feet because his bank account has felt a draft.

Smile and the world smiles with you. Frown and the world laughs at you.

It would be great if we could live backwards—be born old and grow a day younger every day.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XLIX

ANITA caught up to Jack where he was resting on a boulder trying to get his breath.

"Wait—wait!" she panted and she clutched at his leg, breathing in loud, rasping gasps.

He gave her a hand and then rolled on, breaking the brush aside for her, struggling against the urge to run on ahead, to put this panting, repulsive woman out of his sight.

He thought, "If she fell it wouldn't be my fault!" They had come to a bad place.

What was that? The gravel was slipping under his feet! . . . He shut his eyes . . . mustn't get dizzy . . . steady . . . steady . . . waiting the miniature landslide ceased.

"Jack—wait—"

"Stay there—wait till I see—"

"Jack—help me!" . . . She wouldn't wait. She was right after him, puffing, sniffling, slipping, grabbing at him . . . she'd pull him with her . . . Let go!"

He screamed . . . God, she almost did it . . . they'd both fall . . . Let go, I tell you . . . Let go!" But she wouldn't let go, so he pushed . . . pushed . . . pushed . . .

Anita was falling. Rolling over and over, slowly, like something in a slow moving picture. He watched her blinking. She turned over and over, and then she lay all still, on a great, jutting boulder.

Jack pulled a large silk handkerchief out of his pocket and mopped his face. He sat down and watched the motionless heap that was Anita. She never even screamed. Sweat broke out all over him. She was dead. He had shoved her over. "God, I killed her. I finally killed her . . . Anita, my wife . . . I killed her!"

Guilty Conscience.

Did he say that out loud? He jumped up in a panic. Must be careful . . . must do something . . . get down to where she was . . . call somebody . . . pretend . . . But he couldn't think. He couldn't remember how he got past the bad place, or where he was going. All he could remember was the look on her face as she reached for him, and the feel of her thin body as he put out his hand to save himself.

He sat there watching. His wet clothes steamed in the sun.

A man was crawling up the cliff. He was creeping slowly but surely toward Anita. Jack Beamer watched him with curious, detached attention. Into his aching head crept the conviction that the man had seen everything that he had been watching them for a long time. He thought, "I should go to help him—would look better." But he continued to sit on the ledge mopping his hot face.

The man was a ranger. A tall, thin fellow with long arms and legs. He climbed like a monkey. From time to time he shouted encouragement to Anita . . . as if she could hear, as if she would ever want encouragement again. The thought of Anita, dead at last, made Jack smile. He didn't know why, not because he felt particularly happy about it. He had never wanted anything like this. Damn it, why couldn't she have died naturally, as the doctors promised? Damn quacks, saying she had a weak heart . . . This would look bad for him. He'd have to get down there somehow, say something . . .

"Halloo . . . Halloooo!" he called, waving the handkerchief.

The man had reached the rock on which Anita lay. He stopped for a moment and waved a hand in some sort of signal in answer to Jack's call.

There was something comforting about it. Jack began to feel more like himself. Cupping his mouth with his hands he shouted, "I can't get down there." And after a moment, "She fell. Is she . . . dead?"

The ranger did not answer. He had straightened the woman's crumpled body, and was bending over her as if listening for a sign of life. Jack watched, fascinated. "Is she dead?" he shouted again.

The ranger looked up, and shook his head.

Jack started. "She's not . . . not hurt? Why she fell from way up here—she—"

"The bushes broke the fall. I don't know how bad off she is, though. Have you got a rope up there?"

"There was one on the horse." He forgot that the horses had been left a quarter of a mile below.

Anita wasn't dead. Maybe she'd get well? He turned the new idea over in his head. What was going on down there? She was stirring. The man gave her a drink out of his canteen. They were talking. Talking . . . he didn't like that. That fellow had no business to butt in . . .

He was coming on up the cliff now, climbing steadily toward the ledge . . . Jack shut his eyes for a moment. It made him dizzy to watch.

Attempted Murder.

When he opened them Anita had struggled to a sitting position. He saw that her head was bleeding. She lifted one skinny arm. "He did it!" she screamed. "He tried to kill me!"

"My Heavens!" he whispered. "She can't say that! Why . . . why . . . And he screamed back to her. 'You liar . . . you . . . you miserable HAG!' His voice broke, frightening him. Hysterical. Sounded guilty. Must stop that."

The ranger was right below him now. "My wife's out of her head," he said, and tried to smile.

"Give us a hand," the man commanded, ignoring his words.

Jack extended one limp hand over the bank. "She's been out of her head ever since we got here. I've been afraid of suicide from the first. She leaped off that rock, believe it or not—"

"Give me a hand, can't you? Can't you brace yourself better than that? Pull yourself together, man—"

"I'm all right, I don't need any advice from you!" But he braced himself, and was giving his best when Anita recommenced that thin, shrill screaming . . .

"Why Shouldn't a Murder Story be Warmly HUMAN?" . . .

Winifred Van Duzer wanted to know.

So she wrote the story of "Bim" Martin, a lovely and breezy girl fresh from school who found herself absorbed in finding news for her Dad's paper in sleepy Kingcliffe on the Hudson. And with solving a baffling murder mystery when the news came! The characters in this compelling story are real, recognizable—human, as are all of Winifred Van Duzer's creations. You have never read so thrilling a love story, with the excitement of a detective thriller thrown in!

Merchantville Girl Praises Life Tone Feels 100% Better

Healthier Now Than Ever Two Bottles Did It

Read what this young woman says. Life Tone did for her. Miss Kerrigan was on the verge of giving up her job because of poor health and nervous feeling. I suffered with terrible headaches. I lost weight, strength and energy. I have only taken half a bottle of Life Tone and I can truthfully say that I feel one hundred percent better than I did last week. Life Tone helped Miss Kerrigan because it contains the kind of harmless ingredients which will make lagging organs get busy. The reason this girl couldn't work was because her organs were not working. She lacked in pep because poisonous waste was clogging up her body and keeping her food from supplying energy. As Life Tone has helped Miss Kerrigan it is also helping thousands of other ailing people and will help you just the same. Let pleasant-tasting Life Tone go to work for you.

Mrs. Achsach Byard, of Bordentown, N. J., who is 58 years of age, received a new lease on life by using Life Tone. "I had Indigestion, Gastritis, shortness of breath," says Mrs. Byard, "I was afflicted with severe kidney trouble, had Rheumatism in the joints, and muscles of my hip and thigh, had Headaches, Poor Appetite and was generally run-down. I have taken two bottles of Life Tone so far and already I find I can sleep better, eat better, no longer have indigestion and am relieved of Gastritis. Even the rheumatism and kidney pains across the back have disappeared and I no longer have headaches. I am healthier now and feel better than I have in years. Young and old benefit alike from Life Tone. Children as young as two years have been known to take it and become rejuvenated. After all, the organs of the body are the same at one age as the other. Life Tone's ingredients lend helpful aid to the functioning of each organ and helps it do its intended work. You can make no mistake by using Life Tone. Get a bottle today."

Ice and America Join In Honoring Patriots

Ice and the United States will be honoring the memory of the patriots of both countries who helped to bring about the American Revolution, and especially in paying tribute to the memory of George Washington, during the six months of the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition, sponsored by the French Government, which will open in Paris May 1. The American exhibit at the exposition will help to the world-wide celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington in the attention of all nations.

The emphasis and cement the long friendship of the United States and France, which began during the American Revolution, an exact full-size reproduction of Mount Vernon, home of George Washington, is being constructed on the banks of the river Seine to serve as the attraction building for the American exhibit.

Bascom Slomp, of Virginia, who is commissioner-general of the United States to the French exposition, is also a member of the executive committee of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission. He has just returned from Paris and is now, busily engaged in arranging to have appropriate furnishings and other material from this country to be placed in the duplicate of Mount Vernon on the Seine, and to have the overseas sessions of the United States represented by appropriate exhibits at the exposition.

The executive committee of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission has adopted a resolution officially endorsing the reproduction of Mount Vernon in France. The building, in addition to being the headquarters of the American Commission to the French exposition, will be used as a museum in which will be placed articles connected with Washington and his time, loaned by the French and American Governments and citizens of both countries.

The George Washington Bicentennial Commission is urging Americans to "join in this patriotic endeavor" by contributing Washingtoniana to be exhibited in the Mount Vernon building. Among the many articles which the French Government is lending to the United States Commission in Paris are an original miniature of General Washington and one of Martha Washington, a large topographic map of Yorktown painted in 1830 on the spot by order of Louis Philippe, a series of medals and documents pertaining to American-French friendship, an original bust of Lafayette, taken from Versailles and very little known, autographed documents of Rochambeau, Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette and numerous other articles of historic interest.

The official hostess at the Mount Vernon building will be Miss Anne Madison Washington, a descendant of John Augustine Washington, nephew of George Washington. The building will be furnished as nearly as possible like Washington's home. Among the things which Mr. Slomp is taking to Paris to place in the building are a key to the Bastille and a copy of a picture of Louis XVI, both given to Washington by Lafayette; reproductions of silverware used at Mount Vernon, letters and portraits of famous Frenchmen and American colonists, and other articles appropriate to the time.

ATTEND PARTY

"Billie" Gallagher and mother, of Beaver street, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Jones, of Philadelphia. On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Jones had a surprise party for their daughter Mabel. It was in the form of a Valentine party, and the decorations were suitable for the occasion. Each one of the guests received a favor. Games were played and dancing enjoyed. Mabel and "Billie" did some specialty dancing. Both are students of The Miller Conservatory of Dancing. Later, refreshments were served. The young guests departed elated over the enjoyable evening spent.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE: Will you kindly tell me the best way to ask a boy to my house? The girls I go with have all had boys to their house. I hate to ask them what to say to the boy, but still I can't think of what to say to him. Would you kindly let me know as soon as possible, as I'm waiting very patiently.

CHERIE.—Perhaps you could persuade your people to allow you to have a little party? It would then be quite a simple matter to ask him nicely to come to your home as you are having a little evening and feel that it would not be complete or successful without him. It is not how one couches an invitation, but the sincerity that counts.

DEAR NANCY LEE: I am very much in love with a young fellow one year my senior. He tells me he loves me also. But because he is not of my birth my friends think I shouldn't go around with him. If I do I lose them, as my friends. My mother does not mind my going with him. Please tell me if I should continue going with him and lose my friends, or stop and keep my friends.

BLONDY.—Do you intend to shape your life on the advice of your friends and do you also expect to spend your existence with those same friends? If not, you should utterly disregard their remarks and do as you choose. The main thing is that your mother approves of the young man. She is the only one whose opinion really matters.

Martyrdom Is Romantic to Seventeen

Suffer for Love—That Was Tribby's Grand Dream
—and Then She Met Her
"Svengali!"

By WINIFRED BLACK

MET Tribby the other day, right in the street, walking along just as if she was plain Mary Jane, or Kate, or Sally, and Tribby at all. Poor little Tribby. No, she isn't a girl, and she isn't an artist's model, like the Tribby we all saw long and ago, when she wore bandages and heart-shaped lockets, and cut her hair the Langtry way, and called everybody we didn't like "Svengali."

But she's Tribby just the same, or dear. And Svengali has hypnotized her just as Svengali hypnotized Tribby in the dear old book it made you feel as if some tricky little was tickling your heart strings with his wings all the time were reading.

Poor little Tribby, she had a pleasant home, and quite a good many pleasant friends, but she was seventeen — just seventeen. And the world was to her a great story — full of witches, and plims and sprites, and fairy prints, and heroes, and heroines. She wanted to be a heroine herself.

Wished to Be "Different" — She didn't want to grow up and married to the nice boy in the black and live in a gay little apartment, and give her friends, and friends like the rest of the Kitties, Coras and Louises knew.

She wanted to suffer and be a martyr, and show the old what real woman could be and do. And she met a rather elderly man who hated the world and everyone it except her.

The elderly man had been disappointed in life, his illusions were shattered, his heart was broken, and how happy he would be if he could believe that there was one person in the world who was really new and really good and really real.

Somebody who didn't care for money and place and power. Somebody who would be happy a hut in a desert and eat dried beans, and canned codfish three times a day, and love them, if someone she loved was there to eat them with her.

And Tribby listened and believed. And the first thing she knew, "Svengali" made her believe that body in the world loved her, or derstood her — but "Svengali."

Surrounded by "Enemies" — Her mother was indifferent, her father was careless, her big sister was jealous of her, and her nice, old, fussy, old aunt — why she is a malicious, meddling old witch, according to "Svengali."

Everybody laughed at her, everybody plotted against her, everybody hated her — but "Svengali."

And poor little Tribby put her head in the hands of "Svengali" and "Svengali" and Tribby ran away and were married.

And "Svengali" was very poor and it was all successful. The cold world was envious of him, Tribby ought, but she would help him to know what he really was.

So she dropped out of the life she knew, the simple, friendly, kindly life of home and home friends, and led a strange life with strange, bitter, envious, grudging, people who did nothing in themselves, neither money nor friends nor love, nor joy living, and who hated everything, and everybody, who was not a bit of failure like themselves.

The other day Tribby went home, and when her old friends saw her, they didn't know what to think. Gay, light-hearted, laughing, affectionate little Tribby — what had happened to her, where did she get her pale face, and crushed and timid eyes?

Poor little thing, she is starving for death for love and life, and for laughter — when will she come out of the strange spell of poor shabby, blithered "Svengali" has cast upon her? I wonder. And everyone who loves her wonders too.

Why Commute?

Why travel back and forth to your employment, which is here in Bristol, when such desirable dwellings are to be obtained here at such reasonable rents? It will pay any individual to investigate!

Work Where You Live and Live Where You Work.

If you are employed in Bristol you should live here. It will be less expensive and there are numerous other advantages derived from making your home in the town where you are employed.

You will save many hours a year which are now spent in traveling and you will have more time with your family.

The saving in money will also be considerable. Add to that which you are now paying for rent the amount which you spend in traveling back and forth to your employment here. You'll be surprised at the total. Rent a house here at a moderate rental and bank the difference.

Houses.

Comfortable dwellings, well situated and at moderate rents are to be found in that portion of Bristol which is immediately adjacent to the P. R. R. passenger station.

These houses make ideal homes and consist of six rooms with bath.

Conveniences.

They are heated by hot-air furnaces with a direct pipe leading to every room. They are lighted with electricity and are equipped with sewer, municipal water and gas.

Each room is well lighted and yet the space devoted to windows is not excessive.

Front porches are another attractive feature as is also a small rear yard where children can play in safety away from the perils of traffic.

Houses such as these would rent for considerably more in any city, where the conveniences would not surpass those offered here.

"Foremost Champion of Freedom in Our Political and Economic Life"

If Lincoln were here today he would realize immediately that the primary cause of this depression was over-production. By over-production he would not mean that we have more goods than the people of the United States can consume, but he would mean that we have more goods than the people can purchase within the limits of their incomes. This under-purchasing power may be remedied by higher wages, unemployment insurance, or the lessening of stock dividends.

The last issue of national importance which we shall bring forth in Lincoln's light is "Prohibition." As for the people who inhabited the world in Lincoln's time, the practice of drinking was just as old as the world itself was to them. When they first opened their eyes upon the stage of existence, intoxicating liquor was recognized by everybody, used by everybody, and repudiated by nobody. In Lincoln's own words, "It commonly entered into the first draught of the infant and the last draught of the dying man." Liquor may have entered into the first draught of most of us infants, but it will not enter the last draught of the dying man of today, that is as long as the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment continues. Some of the statesmen of today are advocating the repeal of this amendment. What would Lincoln say to this if he were here? We must say that he would agree with this advocacy, only if a more effective method of temperance be substituted, at least, according to this following statement which he made in Washington, in 1842. With that noted simple manner which has moved the hearts of so many men, he said:

"Turn now the temperance revolution. In it we shall find a stronger bondage broken, a viler slavery unloosed, a greater tyrant deposed; in it more of want supplied, more disease healed, more sorrow assuaged. By it no orphans starving, no widows weeping. And what a noble ally this to the cause of political freedom; with such an aid its march can not fail to be on and on, till every son of earth shall drink in rich fruition the sorrow-quenching draughts of perfect liberty. Happy day, when all appetites controlled, all passions subdued, all matter subjected—mind, all-conquering mind, shall live and move, the monarch of the world. Hail, fall of fury! Reign of reason, all hail!"

Considering an international issue, as one watches the brain power with which the statesmen of today are struggling, concerning the relationship between the almost world-wide depression and current drift toward war, one is reminded of World Peace. One thinks of the effect these economic relations have upon problems of peace and such issues—which make for irritation and ill-will. What would Lincoln's attitude be? Would he believe in isolation, or in the idea that science and invention have eliminated space and distance and that only through Internationalism can the peace objective be reached?

The only answer to these questions is the quoting of the last phrase of his closing sentence in his Second Inaugural Address:

"To do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

Firmly standing by this last sentence, he lost no opportunity in his Presidential messages to foreign countries to encourage them that they correct the evils which spring from enmity among nations. We know that Lincoln congratulated these foreign countries as they become Republics, when the crisis in forms of government was between a monarchy and a republic. But how would he act in the crisis of today with dictatorships, communisms, and revolutionary doctrines of Trotsky and Lenin?

Now, we may conclude that the problems confronting us are as involved as those which confronted Lincoln; in some cases particularly in the last, they are still more grave and perplexing. But with the strength of Lincoln's logical faculty and his accurate vision toward such fundamental questions relating to government and men, we can conjecture that he would do a great deal were he to reappear in our midst.

Let us use Hill's appropriate and original idea of paraphrasing Wordsworth's call to the soul of Milton into the yearning cry of America:

"Lincoln, thou shouldst be living at this hour;
America hath need of thee: she is a fee

Of stagnant waters: altar, sword, and pen,
Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and power,
Have forfeited their ancient English dower

Of inward happiness. We are selfish men;
Oh! raise us up, return to us again;
And give us manners, virtue, freedom, power,

Thy soul was like a star, and dwelt apart,
Thou hadst a voice whose sound was like the sea,

Goitre Not A Disease

Milwaukee Doctor Makes Remarkable Discovery

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rock, Dept. A-15, Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 24 years, has perfected a different method of treatment for his patients that has proved remarkably successful. This same method is now being used for a home treatment of goitre cases all over the country with astonishing results. The doctor states that goitre is a condition which grows worse with neglect and recommends immediate attention no matter how small the growth may appear. He strongly opposes needless operations. Dr. Rock is the author of a book that tells in a simple way about treating goitre at home. He has published this book at his own expense and will send a copy free to anyone interested. NEW NATIONAL BALL MAY DOOM 10-CENT HOME RUN

By Les Conklin
I. N. S. Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Whether or not baseball fans would welcome a return of the pitchers' battles of fifteen years ago, as many students of the national pastime have contended, will be demonstrated by the time the roses bloom in June.

By then the National League's new ball, with its heavier cover and raised stitches designed to give a pitcher a firmer grip on the horseshoe will have been given a thorough test. Experts believe that low-scoring games in the senior organization will become the rule rather than the exception, and that the ten-cent home run will be doomed to extinction.

The quality of the yarn and other fabrics used in construction of the ball will remain unchanged, and if a batsman "hits one on the nose," the pellet will sail over the distant barriers almost as easily as the jackrabbit variety. But with the raised seams enabling a pitcher to put plenty of stuff on the ball, it will not be an easy matter for a slugger to "get hold of one."

Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, was one of the three National League club owners who voted for retention of the old ball. He firmly believes that extra base hitting, and not brilliant pitching, is what the fans want.

"I think the fans like to watch a game ending in a score of something like 6 to 4," says the genial Judge. "And I am afraid that if 1 to 0 and 2 to 1 scores become frequent, attendance is going to fall off."

The real test of the new ball will not come until the league season gets under way. In the spring the pitchers always are ahead of the batters, who generally are unable to hit curves during the grapefruit league season, and low-scoring games occurred frequently during the training camp season even with the lively ball in use.

If the new ball pans out as expected, and batting averages take a decided slump, it would not be surprising to see a flock of ordinary pitchers take a new lease on life. Hurlers who were just so-so last season may now be ranked as stars.

If this comes to pass, there will be fewer holdouts next winter and most of them probably will be pitchers. Even though he will have the new ball as an alibi, a slugger whose batting average drops fifteen to twenty points in 1931 is going to have a tough time getting a salary increase. The boxmen, on the other hand, will be able to point with pride to their 1931 records, at least as far as earned runs are concerned. And earned runs are what they pay off on when pitchers ask for more money.

Another angle is that National League sluggers will have no chance of breaking Babe Ruth's record of sixty homers. Hack Wilson almost made the grade last year with 56 four-baggers, but the slower ball probably will ruin his chances of turning the trick in 1931.

Planning Interesting Musical Show

A musical comedy entitled "The Belle of Barcelona," will be given in the near future by the Harriman Men's Club, under the direction of Samuel Shire. Mr. Shire has directed several musical comedies in the past, which have been very successful and "The Belle of Barcelona" promises to be the best show that he has presented to the public as yet.

The show is snappy and colorful. The dances are of Spanish style and the music of Spanish rhythm. The dances this year will be coached by Miss Winifred Tracy. Miss Tracy has exceptional ability in this line and she is striving to make the dancing the most spectacular ever. She has eight for a single chorus and eight for a double chorus. There are many steps and many changes in a show of this character and Miss Tracy is drilling the choruses in professional style.

The story: Marguerite DeMontero, (Miss Winifred Tracy) the daughter of a wealthy plantation owner, has just returned home from a finishing school in Madrid. It is fiesta time in Barcelona and the day of the season's first bull fight. Marguerite meets her friends on the plaza where they are singing, dancing and lauding the great torreador, Emilio (Thomas Barrett). Three years before, while touring United States with her parents, Florida DeMontero, (Miss Helen Taylor) and Louis DeMontero (John Burdett), Marguerite met Lieut. Harold Wright (Marvin McEuen). It was love at first sight, but their courtship was soon interrupted by her unexpected return to Spain.

Lieutenant Wright goes to Barcelona as customs inspector, and arrives at the time of the annual fiesta. On the day of Marguerite's return from Madrid as he is walking in the plaza, he finds a mantilla to which is attached a silver pin. He recognizes it as one he had given her in Washington. They meet when Marguerite returns looking for her mantilla, and the old romance is resumed. Lieutenant Wright learns she has become engaged by her parents to a scheming Spanish nobleman, Francisco DeLaVega (Leslie Moss), much against her will. He secures the aid of his friends in his efforts to break this engagement, but is opposed by the scheming nobleman and Marguerite's ambitious parents. Lieutenant Wright suspects the nobleman, who is chief inspector for the Spanish government, as being responsible for certain alleged conditions existing at the customs house. He begins an investigation that leads to some surprising discoveries. The scenes that follow lead up to a climax in the third act, revealing the true character of the nobleman. He pleads for mercy through Marguerite's parents, which is granted after a promise to release her from the old engagement. All ends well as wedding bells proclaim Marguerite's engagement to Lieutenant Wright.

The part of Redro, manager of DeMontero plantation, is taken by a rather new actor, Earl Lynn, and is well placed.

Don Juan (R. Hendricks) and Don Jose (H. Heaton), student friends of Emilio; Dona Marcela (Mildred Cahall) and Dona Anita (Thelma Wallace) friends of Marguerite.

Miss Martha Matilda Ayers, an English governess (Mrs. Edith Burton-wood), plays a very humorous part with Patrick (Pat) Malone (Arthur Reynolds), companion of Harold Wright. These two will give the audience many a laugh. They are well known for character-acting and need no introduction.

Captain Colton of the cruiser, "Montana," and his marines, are real soldiers of Uncle Sam and they act like it. Mercedes, Marguerite's sister (Miss Winifred McElvaine) with her clear bell like voice, plays and depicts love scenes with her lover, Emilio. These two seem to make the show a pleasing piece.

The date of the show will be announced later, but it will be presented some time the latter part of March.

Sport's Sign of Spring

By HARDIN BURNLEY

THE DAVIS CUP CANDIDATES ARE ALREADY COMPETING IN EARLY SEASON TOURNAMENTS!

UP North, at least, Lincoln's Birthday is rather early to start looking for signs of Spring. Nevertheless, even a casual survey of the nation's sporting activities always gives clear evidence of Winter's wane at this time of year. Here's what the Sport Bug weather prophets point to:

A rash of baseball "holdout" stories in the press, photos of Babe Ruth working off that "spare tire," major league preparations for Southern training camps, receipt by sports editors of team rosters, itineraries, etc., with photos of "future" Cabbies, Alexanders, Ruths, etc., from vividly imaginative press agents.

shows already under way; annual newsprint bout between Sharkey and Dempsey authors ends in the two Jacks shaking hands and—commenting on new Spring headgear, their welfare, etc.

Champion Schmeling, arriving in New York, not expecting to hear bird sing till next June, when he will try to find out if Stribling is as rough as Sharkey.

Carners has been practising English in vaudeville, and hopes to acquire a Southern accent visiting Florida to meet Maloney; Farley, Muldoon & Co. are reviving fan interest in Chaucer's "cuckoo" Spring poem, and Gene Tunney has gone to Egypt, perhaps to solve the riddle of the Sphinx.

Our Winter golf tourists are now swinging through their Southwest tournaments, with bright Florida days in the immediate future, and an English sextette—featuring Diana Fishwick, British woman's champion—will compete as individuals in the important ladies' events at Miami and Palm beaches. Spring is always just round the corner when Florida reaches the peak of its season on Washington's Birthday ten days hence.

You need not trust entirely to the groundhog's actions or the calendar. Just limit yourself to the general trend of sport news—the trek to the baseball training camps, and for all real sport bugs that is Spring's first sign.
